COVENTRY, MARCH 1, 1848.

Introduction.

THE EDITOR has been induced to undertake the publication of this CATALOGUE, in compliance with the wishes of most of the principal COLLECTORS in the COUNTY OF WARWICK, and in consequence of the applications which have frequently been made to him for what are generally termed "WARWICKSHIRE PORTRAITS."

The utility and interest of a work of this nature as a book of reference, are too obvious to stand in need of any comments; but the labour of accomplishing it is of no ordinary magnitude, the facts and dates contained in a single line, having often been obtained by great research and difficulty.

His best and most grateful thanks are due to WILLIAM STAUNTON, of LONGBRIDGE HOUSE, ESQ.; to his Son the REVEREND WILLIAM STAUNTON; and to SIR GEORGE CHETWYND, of GRENDON HALL, BART., for constant access to their valuable Collections of PORTRAITS, and for the information which he has from time to time received from each of them. MR. STAUNTON'S Collection is certainly unrivalled.

To MESSRS. SMITH, the very eminent Printsellers in Lisle Street, Leicester Square, London, the Editor is deeply indebted for numerous suggestions, and for the friendly way in which they have favoured him with personal conferences, and also with correspondence during the entire period of the work passing through the press.

To WILLIAM SALT, ESQ. of Russell Square, London; HENRY GRIMES, JUN. ESQ. Leamington; WILLIAM WILLS, ESQ. Birmingham; JOHN TWAMLEY, Esq. Warwick; Robert Bell Wheler, Esq. Stratford on Avon; Mr. Evans, Printseller, London; Mr. J. H. Beilby, of Birmingham; and Mr. Daffern, Coventry, his grateful acknowledgments are tendered for much valuable assistance during the progress of the Catalogue.

No pains have been spared to discover and notice what are termed Private Plates; every enquiry has been made amongst Engravers and Printsellers, and although the Publisher has, in no instance, met with a refusal to communicate the information which he has solicited, it is possible some omissions may occur in the course of the work.

The Editor cannot conclude without acknowledging the assistance which he has derived from Granger's Biographical History of England, and Mr. Noble's continuation; from Bromley's Catalogue of Engraved British Portraits; from Lodge's Portraits of Illustrious Personages of Great Britain; from Chalmers' Biographical Dictionary; and last, but not least, from that immense source of amusement, information, and knowledge—the Gentleman's Magazine.

BROOKE, Greville Fulke, first Lord Brooke, eldest son of Sir Fulke Greville, of Beauchamp Court, in Warwickshire, Nat. there in 1554. Created Lord Brooke, 9th January 1620, represented this County in Parliament, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, and 18th James I. 1620, with Sir Thomas Lucy, and it has been observed that a better choice could not have been made, as both of them were learned, wise and honest. He obtained a grant of Warwick Castle, 2nd James I. which being in a ruinous condition, he expended at least £20,000 in repairing it.

He was a very accomplished and ingenious person. Author of the Life of Sir Philip Sidney, and other learned, and interesting works.

He was stabbed by his Servant (probably his valet), in Brooke House, Holborn, 13th September 1628. Ob. 30th of the same month, Ætat. 74, was buried in the Chapter House of St. Mary's Church, Warwick, where there is a monument to his memory occupying the whole interior of the building.

BROOKE, Robert Greville, second Lord. This nobleman bore a conspicuous part in the troubled times in which he lived; actively engaging both with sword and pen in the cause he had espoused. His views in church and state drew forth from Milton a warm encomium on his character; and his frank and noble bearing rendered him respected and beloved even by his opponents. "A person he was (says Dugdale) who for the nobleness of his extraction, and many personal endowments deserved a better fate; at least to have fallen in a better cause, who (had he lived it is believed by his friends) would soon have seen through the pretences of that faction."

In Dam Street, in the City of Lichfield, upon a small house distinguished by a pavement of white pebbles; Mr. Richard Greene caused a marble tablet to be set up, with the following inscription, "2nd March 1643, Lord Brooke, a General of the Parliament forces, preparing to besiege the Close of Lichfield, then garrisoned for King Charles the First, received his death wound on the spot beneath this inscription by a shot in the forehead from Mr. Dyott, a Gentleman, who had placed himself on the Battlements of the Great Steeple, to annoy the besiegers," which tablet exists to the present day, 1847.

CRAVEN, William, first Earl of, son of Sir William Craven, Knt. Nat. early in 1606, created Baron, 12th March 1627, and Earl of Craven, 1664. By Letters Patent, dated 11th December 1665, the Barony of Craven was settled on Sir William Craven, of Coombe Abbey, in the event of the Earl's death without issue, and in right of descent from that Sir William, it is now held by the present Nobleman. William, first Earl, died unmarried at his house in Drury Lane, London, 9th April 1697, Ætat. 89, and was buried at Binley, near Coventry.

It is said of him, that "he was one of the most accomplished Gentlemen in Europe; an useful subject, charitable, abstemious as to himself; generous to others; familiar in his conversation, and universally beloved." Lodge's Portraits, vol. iii.

DUDLEY, Sir Robert, son of Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester, by Lady Douglas Sheffield, Nat. in 1573.

Sir Robert Dudley was the owner of Kenilworth Castle by the Will of his Father, Robert, Earl of Leicester, dated at Myddelborow, 1st August 1587, in which he is described as his base son, and this was believed to have been done for the purpose of concealing some secret purposes of the Earl. Sir Robert was married to Alice Leigh, of Stoneley, whom, with his children, he deserted, and was so much harassed and disgusted by some unjust proceedings in the Star Chamber, that he resolved never to return to England, and therefore resided at Florence during the rest of his life, and was there buried in the Church of St. Pancras, in 1639, having sold, to Prince Henry, the Castle of Kenilworth and its domains. Sir Robert was celebrated for his very high talents and accomplishments, and so great a favourite with Ferdinand II. Grand Duke of Tuscany, that he was created, by him, Duke of Northumberland, and Earl of Warwick. He was author of a very curious and scientific work, entitled Dell' Arcano del Mare, in 6 folio Vols. which was first published at Florence in the years 1646-7.

Equestrian Portrait, armed, bare-headed, and holding a lance; his titles in Latin on a shield on the corner of the plate, A.D. 1625. "Ætatis suæ 25." Beneath the horse a shield bearing the Bear and Ragged Staff. The only known impression of this plate is in the possession of William Staunton, Esq. of Longbridge.

2nd. By Dr. Thomas, 2 vols. folio, 1730, with additional plates and letter-press. This is the best edition; large paper copies of which, are scarce and valuable.

3rd. Jones's Coventry edition, published in numbers at 6*d.* each. A transcript of the original, with a republication of the first plates. Also a Plate of Blythe Hall as a frontispiece, large folio. A portion of the latter edition, comprising the "Antiquities of Coventre" was published separately, in small folio. Copies of which are now scarce.

GRAINGER, Edward, Esq. second son of Edward Grainger, Esq. for many years in extensive Practice as a Surgeon, at Birmingham. Nat. 28th April 1797.

He was educated at the Free School, and at the age of nineteen, he went to London, unknown personally to a single individual in that great metropolis, and became a Student in Anatomy at St. Thomas's and Guy's Hospitals. With a zeal, that has never been surpassed, and with a success rarely equalled, Mr. Grainger devoted his whole energies to study, and rapidly advanced in every branch of knowledge connected with his profession. The late Sir Astley Cooper, one of the most distinguished Surgeons in Europe, with much liberality, received him as a dresser, without the usual fee, and in this new field he distinguished himself highly, both as a Surgeon and an Anatomist. In the year 1821, Mr. Grainger founded the Webb Street School of Anatomy, having previously delivered lectures in a private house, which were numerously attended by students. The School in Webb Street, although spacious, was so crowded with auditors, that Mr. Grainger was obliged to deliver the same lecture twice daily, a circumstance, it is believed, hitherto unknown in the annals of this department of teaching; in fact, his tide of success, impelled by talents and acquirements of the highest order, knew no reflux. As a Surgeon and Anatomist, and with many competitors of very high reputation, Mr. Grainger obtained an eminence almost unparalleled, and exceeding even his most sanguine hopes and expectations.

In private life, he was as much beloved for the pleasing simplicity of his character and the kindness of his disposition, as he was admired for his mental endowments and undeviating integrity. He died 13th January 1824, at the early age of twenty-six, deeply lamented, respected, and beloved.

From a very fine marble Bust, executed by Mr. Peter Hollins of Birmingham, by subscription amongst Mr. Grainger's former pupils, and which Bust was placed in the Theatre of the Webb Street School. 8vo.

GRAINGER, Richard Dugard, Esq. F.R.S. Brother of Edward, to whom he was demonstrator, and succeeded him as Lecturer on Anatomy and Physiology in Webb Street School. In 1842 he was appointed Lecturer on Physiology at St. Thomas's Hospital, which office he now holds. In 1845 he was elected a Member of the Council of the Royal College of Surgeons of England; and in the present year was nominated to deliver the Hunterian Oration for 1848. He is the Author of several learned and valuable Medical Works, particularly "Observations on the Structure and Functions of the Spinal Cord," and a work on General Anatomy. The Report presented to the House of Commons, from Commissioners appointed to enquire into the Employment of Children, in the London, Birmingham, Nottingham, and Derby Districts, was drawn up by Mr. R. D. Grainger.

HALES, John, was employed under Henry VIII. He had no family, and obtained some of the Monastic possessions exposed to sale at the dissolution on easy terms. He bought the land formerly belonging to the Franciscans, at Whitefriars, Coventry. The building together with the land and other possessions which belonged to St. John's Hospital, were among Mr. Hale's purchases, and this place he converted into the Free School.

By his Will, he directed his executors to convey to the Corporation of Coventry, the site of St. John's Hospital, with lands and messuages belonging to the Priories of the City of Coventry, and Kenilworth, together with the White Friars, Bastille, and Hill Mills. The White Friars' Monastery was afterwards possessed by John Hales, Esq. who converted the building into a residence, in which he entertained Queen Elizabeth. In his Will he described this Mansion by the name of Hales's Place.

The site of the Priory was granted by Henry VIII. with the messuages, gardens, mills, &c. to John Combes and Richard Stanfield; from them it descended to John Hales, and was left by him to his nephew Christopher Hales.

John Hales died the 5th January 1572, and was buried in St. Peter's Chuch, Broad Street, London, where there is a suitable epitaph inscribed to his memory.

He was not only assiduously attentive to his duties, but promoted the interests of learning, when learning was at a very low ebb. He also studied Medicine, and took his degree of M. D. at Cambridge when in his 40th year. He translated Livy, Pliny's Natural History, Plutarch's Morals, Suetonius, Ammianus Marcellinus, Xenophon's Cyropædia, and Camden's Britannia. His translation of Livy is said to have been written with one pen, which produced the following Lines,

"With one sole Pen I wrote this Book,
Made of a gray Goose Quill,
A Pen it was when I it took,
A Pen I leave it still."

KING, Edward, son of a farmer in High Street, Coventry. His mother was Mrs. Ruth Roper, sister to Abel Roper, the celebrated Bookseller in London, to whom King was bound an apprentice, and where he acquired the name of Toby. After parting from his uncle, he caused the dying Speeches of Justice Hall, and Parson Paul, (two Preston Rebels who were hanged at Tyburn) to be printed in a large broad sheet, with their effigies at the top, curiously engraved in copper. The design answered so well, that Toby got money sufficient to enable him to visit his father at Coventry, the place of his nativity, where he shortly opened a house under the name of "Toby's Coffee House." Toby fell at once into a very good business, all the gentlemen of the City and Country (of the Tory Party) frequented his house, chiefly on account of his principles. His uncle generally visited him once a year. Edward King Ob. about 1726.

LEICESTER, Robert Dudley, Earl of, fifth son of John Dudley, Duke of Northumberland, by Jane, daughter and heir, of Sir Henry Guldeford, Nat. 1532. In 1559, Queen Elizabeth granted to him, amongst estates of immense value, the Manor and Castle of Kenilworth, in Warwickshire. On 26th September 1564, he was created Baron of Denbigh, and on the following day Earl of Leicester. In July 1575, Queen Elizabeth visited the Earl of Leicester, at Kenilworth Castle, where she stayed nineteen days. He died of an attack of fever at his house at Cornbury Park, in Oxfordshire, on his way from London to Kenilworth, 4th September 1588, and was buried in Beauchamp Chapel, adjoining St. Mary's Church at Warwick: where a large and gorgeous monument is erected above his remains.

LEIGH, Sir Thomas, Knt. Nat. Was brought up under Sir Rowland Hill, a rich merchant of London, and Lord Mayor of that City; by whom, for his knowledge and industry, he was made his factor beyond the sea; and in that trust deported himself with the highest integrity. Sir Rowland bestowed upon him the hand of his favourite niece, Alice, daughter of John Barker, alias Coverall, of Wolverton, in the County of Salop, by Elizabeth, his wife, daughter of Thomas Hill, and upon the issue of the marriage he entailed the greater part of his estate.

Thomas Leigh subsequently served the office of Sheriff of London, and was Lord Mayor at the death of Queen Mary. He was knighted during his mayoralty, and dying in 1571, was buried in Mercer's Chapel, London, with this epitaph upon his tomb:

Sir Thomas Leigh bi civil life,
All Offices did beare,
Which in this City Worshipfull
Or honourable were:
Whom as God blessed with great Wealth,
So losses did he feele:
Yet never changed he constant minde,
Tho' fortune turn'd her wheele.
Learning he lov'd and helpt the poore
To them that knew him deere;
For whom this Lady and loving Wife
This tomb hath builded here.

His widow lived at Stoneleigh to a very advanced age, having seen her children's children to the fourth generation. She died in 1603, and was buried at Stoneleigh, where she had founded an Hospital for five poor men and five poor women, all of whom to be unmarried persons, and nominated after her decease by Sir Thomas Leigh, her son, and his heirs for ever. Sir Thomas Leigh had issue by this lady, four sons and four daughters. (Through his second son Thomas he was ancestor to the Lords Leigh of Stoneleigh.)

Burke's Dictionary of Extinct Peerages, title "Leigh."

There are two engraved Portraits of Sir Thomas Leigh. The first is an unique print, an octavo wood cut, the first of a series of all the Lord Mayors of London during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The set belonged to Sir John St. Aubyn, and was purchased at his sale in 1840, for the Honble. Thomas Greville, for £29 8*s*. It is now with his library in the British Museum.

The second print is a copy of the preceding, also octavo, and "published by W. Richardson, Castle Street, Leicester Field." It has no name of engraver, or date of publication, but states that it was "Engraved from an Unique Print in the Collection of Sir John St. Aubyn." The name is erroneously spelt "Lee."

LLOYD, Charles, Esq. of Birmingham. Nat. 22nd September 1748, at Birmingham. Son of Sampson Lloyd, the lineal descendant of a very ancient and respectable family in Montgomeryshire. He belonged to the religious body called Quakers. Was distinguished by great vigour and clearness of understanding, and was an accomplished classical scholar. His piety was sincere, and his domestic habits, were those of a Christian gentleman. The Birmingham General Hospital owes to him its completion, and many of its excellent arrangements; the Committee evinced their gratitude for his long services, by raising a subscription for a marble Bust of Mr. Lloyd, which was placed in the Committee Room of the General Hospital. At his father's death, he became a partner in the Banking Firm of "Taylor and Lloyd," at Birmingham, which had been established by the grand-father of the present James Taylor, Esq. and his father. NORTHAMPTON, William Compton, K.G. first Earl of, and President of Wales.

In Drummond's Noble Families . . . Fol.

NORTHAMPTON, Spencer Compton, second Earl, (only son of William, second Lord Compton, who was created Earl of Northampton in 1648), was born at his father's seat at Compton Winyate, in the County of Warwick, in May 1601. He was a highly accomplished gentleman, and so peculiarly distinguished for his extensive knowledge of almost all the languages of Europe, that in his youth, his services were generally used in the reception and audiences of Foreign Ambassadors. From the very dawn of the civil Commotions, Lord Northampton supported the Royal cause with the most active and unwearying zeal. He attended the king in 1639, with a great train of his dependants, against the Scottish rebels. On his return to his own country, he established an association of the principal gentry of the Counties of Northampton, Stafford, and Warwick. He joined the king, immediately before the royal standard was raised at Nottingham on 25th August 1639, with two thousand of the most choice troops which appeared on that awful occasion. He afterwards marched with the King towards the centre of the island, and having fought bravely at the Battle of Edge Hill, on 23rd October 1642, and reduced, shortly after, the Castle of Banbury, by the aid of the cannon which he had taken from the Lord Brooke, assumed the command there, and made that town his head quarters. He followed up his successes by raising the Siege of Stafford, which had been for some time closely invested by a body of the rebel troops, under the command of Sir John Gell, a country gentleman of that neighbourhood, who having been compelled to retreat with considerable loss, returned soon after, strongly re-inforced, and posted himself in view of the town, so as to tempt the gallant Earl to an attack. On Sunday the 19th March 1643, (N. S.) the Earl of Northampton marched out of Stafford, and found his opponents on Hopton Heath, about two miles from the town. A most sanguinary Battle ensued; the Earl's horse was killed under him, and he was left suddenly in the power of his enemies. He was told that his life should be spared, but he answered, that "he scorned to take quarter from such base rogues and rebels as they were." Having received, in the same instant a deep wound in his face, and another from a halbert on the back of his head, he fell lifeless. Gell and his second in command, Sir William Brereton, refused to give up the corpse to his son, or even to permit him to have it embalmed. They carried it with them to Derby, where it was buried in Allhallows Church.

NORTHUMBERLAND, John Dudley, Duke of, and Earl of Warwick. Nat. 1502. A man of great wealth, unbounded ambition, and one of the basest characters of the age. His father, Edmund Dudley, a descendant from the ancient Barons Dudley, was one of the two chief ministers to the avarice of Henry VII. and was put to death, together with his colleague, Empson, in the first year of Henry VIII. Northumberland was possessor of Dudley Castle, and Lord of the Manor of Birmingham. On 17th February 1547, he was appointed Great Chamberlain of England, and created Earl of Warwick, a title the dignity of which was presently after highly enhanced, by a gift from the Crown of the Castle and Manor of Warwick, and many other estates of great value. On 22nd August 1553, he was executed on Tower Hill for High Treason.

ORFORD, Margaret Rolle, Countess of, married, secondly, to Sewallis Shirley, fourth son of Robert, first Earl Ferrers; Baroness Clinton of Maxstoke Castle. 4to.

OVERBURY, Sir Thomas, was the son of Nicholas Overbury, of Bourton on the Hill, in the County of Gloucester, by Mary, his wife, daughter of Giles Palmer, of Compton Scorfen, in the Parish of Ilmington, in Warwickshire. Nat. circa 1581, at Compton Scorfen, in the house of his maternal grandfather. Tradition states, that he frequently resided at Barton on the Heath, in Warwickshire, which was purchased by Walter Overbury, younger son of Nicholas, who built the present Manor House there. Dr. Thomas (the continuator of Dugdale), states Mary Palmer to have been the wife of Walter Overbury.

He was a person of accomplished manners, and an author of some celebrity. But mixing in the Court intrigues, he was committed to the Tower, where he died, by poison, 15th September 1613, and was buried in the Chapel there. Ætat 32.

PARR, Rev. Samuel, L.L. D. son of an eminent Surgeon at Harrow on the Hill, Nat. 26th January 1746-7, and educated at Harrow School; of which, in 1766, he was appointed Senior-Assistant. In 1783 Lady Trafford presented him to the perpetual curacy of Hatton near Warwick, where he resided from the spring of 1786 until his death, on Sunday 6th March 1825. Ætat. 78. He was buried in Hatton Church.

Dr. Parr was a profound classical scholar, and a person of very superior talents and attainments. In early life he attached himself to the Whig party, and continued a firm and consistent supporter of those principles until his death. He was a kind and benevolent man in the discharge of his parochial duties at Hatton, and much respected by his parishioners. In social life he was at all times, to the full extent of his means, generous and hospitable, and enjoyed the sincere esteem of a large circle of friends, many of whom filled prominent stations in society.

PAUL, Rev. William, was the son of Mr. John Paul, of Little Ashby, near Lutterworth, in Leicestershire. Nat. 1678. He was educated at Rugby School, and was admitted to St. John's College, Cambridge in May 1698. He was Curate of Tamworth, and Usher of the Free School there. From thence he went to Nuneaton, in Warwickshire, where he was also Curate, until the Bishop of Oxford in 1709 presented him to the Vicarage of Orton-on-the-Hill, in Leicestershire. He went with Mr. Gascoigne and others, to meet the Rebels at Preston in 1715, and on his way thither, was seized by Major Bradshaw, and one Matthews, a clergyman, but was released by Colonel Noel, a magistrate. After this, he went to Preston, where he read prayers three days together to the Rebels, in the Parish Church, and prayed for the Pretender, by the name of King James III. He was indicted for High Treason, and on his arraignment at Westminster, 31st May 1716, pleaded not guilty, but when brought to the bar of the C. P. 15th June, he withdrew his former plea, and pleaded guilty. He went to the place of execution in his Canonicals, and was executed at Tyburn 18th July 1716.

PEARSON, Richard, Esq. M. D. F. S. A. Nat. 1765 at Birmingham; brother of Thomas Aris Pearson, Proprietor and Editor of "Aris's Birmingham Gazette." Dr. Pearson settled and practised, as a Physician, in his native town until the year 1800, when he went to reside in London, where he ranked amongst the most distinguished members of the Medical Profession. He published many very learned works on the Science of Medicine, particularly a Letter on Ether Vapour, in Dr. Simmons's Medical Tracts, vol. vii. (1797.)

The idea of employing the vapour of Ether as a therapeutic agent originated with Dr. Pearson. In private life, Dr. Pearson was an affectionate father, and a warm and steady friend. Ob. at Birmingham, 11th January 1836, Ætat. 71.

PRIESTLEY, JOSEPH, LL. D. of Birmingham.

It is impossible to give an Epitome of the life and character of the late Dr. Priestley in stronger, more elegant, or energetic language than the following inscription on his Monument, by the late Dr. Parr, recently erected in the Unitarian Chapel, Birmingham.

This Tablet is consecrated to the Memory of the Rev. Joseph Priestley, LL. D.
by his affectionate Congregation,
in Testimony

of their Gratitude for his faithful Attention to their Spiritual improvement and for his peculiar Diligence in training up their youth to rational Piety and genuine virtue:
Of their Respect for his great and various Talents which were uniformly directed to the noblest Purposes:
and of their Veneration for the pure, benevolent, and holy Principles which through the trying Vicissitudes of Life, and in the awful hour of Death,
animated him with the hope of a Blessed Immortality.
His Discoveries as a Philosopher will never cease to be remembered and admired by the ablest Improvers of Science.
His Firmness, as an advocate of Liberty, and his Sincerity as an Expounder of the Scriptures endeared him to many of his enlightened and unprejudiced Contemporaries;
His example as a Christian will be instructive to the Wise, and interesting to the Good of every Country, and in every age.

He was born at Fieldhead, near Leeds, in Yorkshire, 13th March, A. D. 1733.
Was chosen a Minister of this Chapel, 31st December 1780,
Continued in that Office Ten Years and Six Months;
Embarked for America, 7th April 1794.
Died in Northumberland Town, in Pennsylvania, 6th February 1804.
Vide GENT. MAG. July 1806, p. 672.

On the fatal 14th day of July 1791, an enraged mob assembled opposite to the hotel in Temple Row, Birmingham, in consequence of a public dinner to commemorate the French Revolution; and after breaking the hotel windows, and burning two meeting-houses, they proceeded to the house of Dr. Priestley, at Fair Hill, more than a mile distant from the town.

The house was plundered and burnt without mercy, the Doctor and his family barely escaping. Exclusive of the furniture, a very large and valuable library was destroyed. But the greatest loss Dr. Priestley sustained was in the destruction of his philosophical apparatus, and his manuscripts, which can never be replaced.

The Manor and Castle of Kenilworth were granted to him by Charles II. He was appointed Lord Lieutenant of Ireland in 1700, and upon the change of ministry in 1710, he succeeded Lord Somers as President of the Council. He was a person of great natural parts, and esteemed as a statesman, incorruptible, indeed his disposition was deemed too warm to be insincere. He assisted his father in writing his "History of the Rebellion." He died suddenly on 2nd May 1711, Ætat. 67, and was buried in Westminster Abbey. On his death, the estates devolved to his only son, Henry, second Earl of Rochester, and fourth Earl of Clarendon. The title of Clarendon afterwards becoming extinct, it was revived by a new creation in the person of the Honourable Thomas Villiers, second son of the Earl of Jersey, whose grandmother was a daughter of Henry Hyde, the last Earl of Clarendon and Rochester. The Castle and Lordship of Kenilworth have thus descended to the present Earl of Clarendon.

ROUS, JOHN, the celebrated Warwickshire Antiquary, was a native of Warwick, and after having finished his studies at Oxford, resided many years as Chantry Priest at Guy's Cliff, during the latter part of the fifteenth century. In that retirement he devoted himself to the study of Antiquities, especially of his own County. Of his Works the greater part is lost, and of the following nothing but the titles is now known, though LELAND states that he saw and read them. Antiquitates Warwici. De Episcopis Wigorniæ. Vetustates Clivi Guidonici. De Comitibus Warwicensibus. De Academiis Britannicis. Contra Historiolam Cantabrigiensem, and Chronicon Warwicense. There remains, however, a highly interesting Heraldic Roll in his handwriting, of the Earls of WARWICK, from the earliest time: it is now in the College of Arms, but in DUGDALE'S time, was in the possession of Robert Arden, esq. of Park Hall. Also among the Cotton MSS. in the British Museum (Julius E. iv.) is the History of Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, illustrated with fifty-three drawings, all by his hand; these have been published in the second volume of STRUTT'S Horda-angel-cynnan. His remaining work that exists, is Historia Regum Angliæ, which was first published at Oxford, by HEARNE, in 1716; prefixed to which volume, is a collection of extracts from different authors, on the subject of his life and writings. ROUS died at Warwick, 14th January 1491, and was buried in St. Mary's Church.

He classified and arranged for the Corporation of Coventry, all their valuable Municipal Records, in acknowledgment of which services, they presented him with a silver salver. In January 1834, he removed to Leamington, where he died on 12th August 1841, Ætat. 71, and was buried in the Church Yard of St. Michael's, Coventry. Vide Gent. Mag. October 1841.

SHAKSPEARE, WILLIAM, The PRIDE and GLORY of Warwickshire. Of the works of this matchless Poet, it is justly and emphatically observed by Dr. Johnson, that "the Stream of Time, which is constantly washing the dissoluble fabrics of other Poets, passes without injury by the adamant of Shakspeare."—

> "Each change of many coloured life he drew,
> Exhausted Worlds, and then imagined new,
> EXISTENCE saw him spurn her bounded reign,
> And panting TIME toil'd after him in vain."

Nat. Stratford upon Avon, 23rd April 1564. He was the eldest son of Mr. John Shakspeare, who was High Bailiff of Stratford in 1569, by his wife, Mary, youngest daughter of Robert Arden, of Wellingcote (or Wilmecote, as it is now usually spelt) near Stratford upon Avon, and baptized there 26th April 1564. He received his early education at the Free School in Stratford. In 1582, he married Ann Hathaway, who is said to have resided with her parents, at a cottage in the Village of Shottery, about a mile from Stratford upon Avon; and in or about the year 1584, he went to reside in the Metropolis, where he obtained a Fame as lasting and as widely extended as that of England itself. It is extraordinary so little of his life is known; and though volumes have been written on the subject, scarce a single fact of interest respecting him has been elicited. Returning to his native town of Stratford, he purchased New Place, and there passed the three concluding years of his life, in the friendship and acquaintance of the neighbourhood. Ob. 23rd April 1616, Ætat. 52. He was buried in the Chancel of Stratford Church, on the north wall of which is a mural monument, by the chisel of Gerard Johnson, which was erected under the superintendance of his son-in-law, Dr. Hall. This memorial of departed genius draws pilgrims from every quarter of the civilized world.

SMITH, Timothy, Esq. of the Laurels, near Birmingham. Ob. 16th July 1834, Ætat. 70.

The main features of his character, were, equity and kindness: strict fidelity, invariable and delicate honour, an earnest desire of doing all the good in his power, and the ability of doing it with much judgment and effect, and in a very conciliatory spirit and manner. Although he was a public man, and was formed more than many others to be such, he most prized the duties and delights which awaited him amidst his family; around its hearth, and in the circle of numerous and attached friends, he joined and communicated the happiness, that he chiefly valued. His domestic and social virtues can never be forgotten by those who had the privilege of knowing him as a parent, a husband, a master, a guardian, a counsellor, a neighbour. He was an encouraging example of the success attendant on persevering diligence and uniform integrity; and his love of his native town, and his activity to the last in advancing its interests and improvement, are all well deserving of commemoration. In this career of usefulness he had to struggle with unavoidable difficulties, which however he surmounted by means of his habitual zeal, benignity, and wisdom.

Nearly half a century had passed since he had entered on his honourable course; after long sustaining a sort of patriarchal office and relation among his townsmen, he gently fell asleep. Happy in this, that no lingering and sadly tormenting malady preceded his dissolution; yet happier, that he could review a well spent and conscientious life, and in humble hope, rely upon "His FATHER and his GOD."

THOMAS, Rev. William, D.D. Nat. in 1670. Educated at Westminster School, from whence he was elected to Trinity College, Cambridge, 25th June 1688. After taking his Master's degree he went into Orders, and was presented to the ~~Vicarage~~ Rectory of Exhall, in Warwickshire, through the interest of Lord Somers, to whom he was distantly related. In 1723 he was presented to the Rectory of St. Nicholas, in Worcester, by Bishop Hough, to whom he dedicated "Antiquitates Prioratus majoris Malverne," printed in 1725. In 1730, he published an edition of Sir William Dugdale's "Antiquities of Warwickshire, Illustrated," to which he made many valuable additions. (Vide ante, p. 25.) His industry was amazing; as he hardly allowed himself time for sleep, meats, or amusement. Ob. 26th July 1738, Ætat. 68, and was buried in the Cloisters of Worcester Cathedral, near to his grand-father, William Thomas, Bishop of Worcester, who died 25th June 1688.

with the Gold Medal of Merit of Prussia.
with the Gold Medal of Divinity of Austria.
with Queen Adelaide's Medal of Merit.

Vice Consul for Russia, France, Prussia, Austria, Spain, Portugal, Brazils, Sweden, and Norway.

This distinguished and talented person, was a native of Birmingham, where he resided, in Colmore Row, from 1793 till 1844, when he retired from business, and went to live at Ludlow, from whence he removed to Bath. His manufactures of gold, and silver plate, jewellery, medals, tokens, (silver and bronzed), gilt and plated buttons, plated wares, and other articles, were very extensive, and were displayed with great taste, in a suite of showrooms, in Church Street, which were inspected by every individual of rank or consequence, who visited the town of Birmingham. Sir Edward did great credit to his original master, the late Matthew Boulton, Esq. of Soho. Both names will be long remembered, and revered as most liberal patrons and promoters of the fine Arts, and the improvements they effected in many of the manufactures of the great commercial town of Birmingham.

THORNTON, Abraham, of Castle Bromwich. Was tried at Warwick Summer Assizes 1817, for the murder of Mary Ashford. [Vide Ashford, Mary, ante, p. 2.] Her brother afterwards brought a Writ of Appeal, in the Court of K. B. against him, for the murder of his sister, but he was discharged. He emigrated to America, where he died September 1820.

From a Sketch by Sir Thomas Lawrence, made in the Court of K. B. during the argument on the Writ of Appeal in 1818. p. p. 4to.

There are also two other Portraits of him, prefixed to different editions of his Trial.

See Miller's Biographical Sketches, vol. ii. p. 300.

THROCKMORTON, Sir Nicholas, Knt. fourth son of Sir George Throckmorton, of Coughton, in Warwickshire. Was bred beyond the seas, where he attained to great experience. He was much in favour with Queen Elizabeth, who sent him Ambassador to France and Scotland. He was an able Minister, and much attached to the interest of his Royal Mistress. It was universally believed that he was poisoned by a salad, at supper, at the Earl of Leicester's, "no mean artist (says Fuller) in that faculty." It is certain that he died soon after having eaten it, and before he could be removed from table. Ob. 12th February 1570, Ætat. 57.

TOTNES, George Carew, Earl of. This illustrious nobleman was the son of George Carew, a clergyman who was promoted to the Archdeaconry of Totnes, in Devonshire; afterwards he was Dean of Bristol, Dean of Christ Church, Oxford, and lastly Dean of Exeter and Windsor. He was born in 1555, and at the age of fifteen was admitted a Gentleman Commoner of Pembroke College, in Oxford. He shortly entered into Queen Elizabeth's Army, and distinguished himself in various military services by prudence and bravery.

On 31st May 1580, he was married at Stratford on Avon, to Joyce, eldest daughter and co-heiress of William Clopton, Esq. of Clopton, in the parish of Stratford on Avon, and about a mile distant from the town; a family very ancient and honourable. The Manor and Mansion House of Clopton, was granted by Peter de Montford to John de Clopton, in the reign of Henry III.

In 1596, he had a command under the Earl of Essex, in the celebrated and successful voyage to Cadiz, returning home laden with riches. Soon after his return, he was sent by Queen Elizabeth to Ireland, (having previously received the honour of knighthood) with a powerful force, to counteract the attempts of the Rebels and Spaniards to reduce that kingdom. In 1601, he was made President of Munster, also, a Privy Councillor, and Lieutenant General of the Ordnance in Ireland. An historical account of all the memorable events which happened in that kingdom, during the three years he continued there, entitled "Pacata Hibernia," was written by him, and published by his Secretary and natural son, Sir Thomas Stafford, Knt. 1633.

James I. immediately after his accession to the English throne, appointed him Governor of the Island of Guernsey, and Castle of Cornet; and by letters patent, dated the 4th June 1605, (3rd James I.) that Monarch advanced him to the degree and dignity of a Baron, by the title of Lord Carew, of Clopton, County of Warwick. After this advancement, he was made Master of the Ordnance for life: in the 14th James I. he was sworn a member of the Privy Council, and was also appointed Vice Chamberlain and Treasurer to Anne, Queen of James I. Upon the accession of Charles I. he was, by that Sovereign, (who highly esteemed him on account of his great reputation and meritorious exploits) on the 5th of February, in the first year of his reign, created Earl of Totnes, a dignity he lived to enjoy only four years; for he died, without issue, on the 27th March 1629, in the Savoy Buildings, London, Ætat. 73 years and nearly 10 months. Thus died this great and venerable Hero, "who bore his blushing honours thick upon him," whose whole life was devoted to the service of his country, and whose real worth and abilities may be better estimated by the numerous trusts committed to his hands, than by any eulogy which can be now bestowed upon him. His remains were brought from London, with the funereal pomp suitable to his high station; and interred in the family vault of the Cloptons, at the east end of the north aisle of Stratford Church; where a magnificent monument is erected to his memory, and that of his Countess, who survived him about seven years, and died at Twickenham, in Middlesex, on the 14th February 1636, being also buried in the same vault.

TOULMIN, Joshua, D.D. Nat. in London, 11th May 1740. Resided at Taunton in Somersetshire, and published a History of that Town in 1791. Removed to Birmingham in January 1804, when he became one of the Pastors of the Congregation of Unitarians, formerly under the care of the Rev. Dr. Priestley. He was well known as the Author of many Theological works, Historical, Practical, and Controversial. In him, an honest zeal for what he believed the Scriptural truth, was happily combined with the most unaffected piety, the most amiable simplicity, and the most diffusive benevolence. He exercised the utmost diligence in advancing the cause of Christian truth, Liberty and Virtue. Ob. at Birmingham, 23rd July 1815.

WILMINGTON, Spencer Compton, Earl of, K.B. was the third son of James Compton, third Earl of Northampton, by his second wife, Mary, daughter and heiress of Baptist Noel, Viscount Campden. He was Speaker of the House of Commons, in the Parliaments of 1714 and 1722; Paymaster of the Forces, and Treasurer of Chelsea Hospital. Created Baron Wilmington, on 11th of January 1726. In 1730, his Lordship was constituted Lord Privy Seal, and advanced on 14th May, in the same year, to the dignities of Viscount Pevensey and Earl of Wilmington. In December following he was declared Lord President of the Council and installed a K.G. He was esteemed a personage of great worth, abilities, and integrity. His Lordship died unmarried, at his House in St. James's Square, London, on 2nd July 1743, when his titles and honours became extinct; but his estates passed, by his Lordship's bequest, to his brother George, fourth Earl of Northampton, and have since been carried by that nobleman's great-grand-daughter, Lady Elizabeth Compton, (Vide ante p. 13) only daughter and heiress of Charles, seventh Earl of Northampton, into the Cavendish family, upon her Ladyship's marriage on 27th February 1782, with Lord George Augustus Henry Cavendish, first Earl of Burlington, uncle and heir presumptive of the Duke of Devonshire. The Barony of Wilmington was revived on 7th September 1812, in the creation of Charles, ninth and late Earl, to be Marquis of Northampton.

WILMOT, John, Esq. F.R.S. S.A. second son of the Right Hon. Sir John Eardley Wilmot, Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. Nat. 1748-49. Educated at Derby, Westminster, and Brunswick Schools, and at University College, Oxford. Afterwards elected Fellow of All Souls. Entered at the Temple, called to the Bar in 1771, and went the Midland Circuit. In 1783 he was made a Master in Chancery, having been chosen for Tiverton, in Devonshire, in the two preceding Parliaments. In 1782, appointed a Commissioner for enquiring into and satisfying the Claims of the American Loyalists; the labours of himself and his colleagues were crowned with success, and gave universal satisfaction. In 1784, he was elected with Sir Sampson Gideon, afterwards Lord Eardley, his brother-in-law, member for Coventry, in opposition to Lord Sheffield and Mr. Conway, afterwards Marquis of Hertford. In 1790, Mr. Wilmot convened a meeting at the Freemasons' Tavern, in London, to consider of some means of relieving the French Refugees; the meeting was most numerous and respectable, Mr. Wilmot was called to the chair; subscriptions to a large amount were immediately entered into, and a fund created, which with the assistance of Parliament, and the contributions of every parish in the kingdom, relieved those unhappy exiles from their native country. In 1804, from bodily infirmity, he resigned his Mastership in Chancery. He purchased Bruce Castle, situate at Tottenham, about five miles from London, where he resided, and Ob. 23rd June 1815, Ætat. 67, lamented by all who knew the virtues of his public and private character. He was father of the late Sir John Eardley Eardley Wilmot, Bart. formerly M. P. for the Northern Division of Warwickshire, and Governor of Van Dieman's Land, who died 3rd February 1847, Ætat. 64.

WREN, Sir Christopher. Our most eminent Architect. Mr. Elmes, in dedicating his Memoirs of the Life of Sir Christopher Wren, to the President of the Royal Society, designates him as "The ornament and pride of English Science and Art, the associate of that illustrious band of Philosophers, whose discoveries and inventions do honour to our nation, and whose union formed that Society, of which he was one of the founders and earliest presidents, and whose members were the patrons, fosterers, and promulgators, of the Newtonian Philosophy, and of its immortal Author."

Sir Christopher was born at East Knoyle, in Wiltshire, the rectory of his father Dr. Christopher Wren, afterwards Dean of Windsor, on Friday, 20th October 1632. He was educated, under Dr. Busby, at Westminster School, and was admitted a Gentleman Commoner of Wadham College, Oxford, in 1646. B.A. 18th March 1650. Elected a Fellow of All Soul's College, Oxford, 2nd November 1653. M.A. 12th December in the same year. Doctor of Civil Law, 12th September 1661. Appointed Surveyor General to His Majesty King Charles II. 6th March 1668. Knighted 20th November 1673. On 12th November 1673, Sir Christopher Wren was appointed, under the Great Seal, Architect and one of the Commissioners for rebuilding the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, the first stone of which was laid by Sir Christopher Wren, on the 21st June 1675, in the presence of Henry Compton, Bishop of London, (Vide ante p. 13), Thomas Strong, the Master-mason, and others. On 2nd December 1697, the Choir of the new Cathedral of St. Paul was opened for Divine Service, and on 1st February 1699, the beautiful Chapel, called the Morning-prayer Chapel, in St. Paul's, was opened for Service. In 1713, Sir Christopher Wren purchased Wroxhall Abbey, in Warwickshire, where he occasionally resided; he built the garden walls there, which are constructed in a very peculiar style. During the time he filled the office of Surveyor General, he principally resided at a house appropriated to his office in Scotland Yard, Whitehall. Afterwards he dwelt occasionally in St. James's Street. He also rented a House from the Crown at Hampton Court, to which he made great improvements. In coming from Hampton Court to London, he caught a cold, from the effects of which he never recovered; he died, at his house in St. James's Street, on 25th February 1723, Ætat. 91, and was buried in the crypt of St. Paul's Cathedral Church.

ESSEX, Robert Devereux, Earl of, was the only son of the unfortunate favourite of Queen Elizabeth, and inherited much of his father's popularity. Nat. in 1592, at Essex House, in the Strand, and was restored in the twelfth year of his age, by James I. to the dignities, and afterwards to the estates, which had been forfeited by his father's attainder. He was educated at Eton School, and at Merton College, Oxford. In 1605, he took the degree of M.A. After a most unfortunate marriage in January 1606, O. S. followed by a divorce in 1613, he retired to his ancient Castle of Chartley, in Staffordshire, where he remained seven years, exercising in a confined circle, the hospitality suited to his rank. In 1620, he joined his friend Henry, Earl of Oxford, in raising troops to serve in the Palatinate, whither they went on an unsuccessful expedition; and in the following year, they served in Holland, under Prince Maurice of Nassau. His courage was great, his honour inflexible. On the accession of Charles I. he was employed as Vice Admiral in an expedition against Spain, which proved unsuccessful. In 1626, he made another campaign in the Low Countries, and shortly after he formed a second unhappy match, by marrying the daughter of Sir William Paulet, she disgraced herself by an intrigue with a Mr. Uvedale, and was divorced within two years after her marriage. In May 1641, the King appointed him Lord Chamberlain of the Household, and soon after Lieutenant General South of Trent. When the King, on quitting his Capital in January 1642, to avoid the outrageous disturbances which followed his visit to the House of Commons to demand the five members, required, as usual, the attendance of his household, Essex pleaded in excuse, his obligations to attend in his place as a Peer of the Realm; he was therefore dismissed from his office of Lord Chamberlain. In July 1642, the Rebels appointed him General of their army, then raising. He opposed the King in person, at the sanguinary Battle of Edge Hill, on 3rd October 1642, when the victory was so indecisive, that each party claimed it; afterwards he was successful in some few instances, but in other important trusts he did little to recommend himself to the persons in whose interests he was employed. In 1642, he was appointed Recorder of the City of Coventry, which office he held until his death on 14th September 1646. He was buried in Westminster Abbey.

HAYES, Catharine, was the daughter of a poor man of the name of Hall, who lived about four miles from Birmingham, on the borders of Warwickshire. Nat. 1690. When about fifteen years of age, in consequence of a dispute with her mother, she left home, and meeting some officers of the army on the road, she was prevailed upon to accompany them to Great Ambersley, in Warwickshire, where she remained with them a considerable time. On being dismissed by them, she wandered about the country, till arriving at the house of Mr. Hayes, a farmer, in Warwickshire, his wife was induced to hire her as a servant; Hayes' eldest son, John, fell in love with her, and married her without his parents' knowledge. After the lapse of about six years, they went to London, where Hayes engaged a house, and opened a shop in the chandlery and coal trade, in which he was successful, but his wife's conduct was so reprehensible, that he was obliged to change his residence, and ultimately to give up housekeeping, and hire lodgings in Tyburn Road, since called Oxford Road. Thomas Billings, a journeyman Tailor, a son of Mrs. Hayes by former connections, lodged in the same house. A man of the name of Thomas Wood, an acquaintance of Hayes', arriving from the country, being apprehensive of being impressed, Hayes took him into his house. In a very short time, Mrs. Hayes prevailed upon Billing and Wood, to murder her husband, and having made him drunk, whilst asleep Billings broke his skull with a coal hatchet, and Wood struck him twice on the side of his head; they afterwards cut off the head from the body, Catharine Hayes held the pail to receive it, Billings supported the head whilst Wood cut it off with a pocket knife, Billings and Wood the same night threw the head into the Thames, near the horse ferry, at Westminster. Soon after daybreak on the following day, a watchman discovered the pail with the head in it; the head after being washed and cleaned, was put upon a pole in the churchyard of St. Margaret's, Westminster, where it remained a few days. Ultimately it was identified. Hayes, Billings, and Wood were apprehended, and each made a full confession of guilt, and all the horrible, diabolical and disgusting circumstances attending the murder.

They were arraigned at the Old Bailey 22nd April 1726, Catharine Hayes for petit Treason, Billings and Wood for the wilful murder of John Hayes. They pleaded guilty. Hayes was convicted. Wood died in the condemned hold in Newgate; BILLINGS was executed at Tyburn, with eight others for various offences, on 9th May 1726. After they were turned off, Hayes being brought to a stake, was chained thereto, and burned to death.

MACREADY, WILLIAM CHARLES, an eminent Tragedian. Nat. at Birmingham. His father was lessee and manager of the Theatre in that town for many years. He received the rudiments of his education at the school of Mr. Thomas Edgell, in St. Paul's Square, Birmingham, and went subsequently for its completion to the Grammar School at Rugby. He early manifested a predilection for the stage; his profound conception, and classic impersonation of the principal
